APOPLEXY ENDS BRYAN'S CAREER

COMMONER DIES DURING AFTER-DINNER SLEEP

NOTED ORATOR PASSES ON LAST BATTLEFIELD

Exhausted by Evolution Fight, End Comes Quietly — Attended Sunday Morning Services in Apparent Good Health.

Dayton, Tenn.—William Jennings Bryan, for thirty years a dominant figure in American politics, and three times a Democratic candidate for the presidency, died here on the field of his last great battle.

The great Commoner, exhausted from his vigorous fight for fundamentalism during the trial of John T. Scopes, was found dead of apoplexy on his bed Sunday afternoon at the home of Richard Rogers, where he had lived since he came here for the evolution trial. He died alone, but within sight of his wife, who believed that he was sleeping peacefully as she sat on the steps outside.

Bryan fought desperately every battle he ever waged, whatever his decision, but the last moments of his fight with death remain hidden from the world. His physician said that a hemorrhage of the brain attacked the great political leader.

Bryan's body was discovered, prone on the bed in his room, when James McCardy, his chauffeur, went to awaken him shortly after 4 o'clock. A call to Mr. Bryan brought no response. Examination disclosed that death had stilled the golden voice and the vigorous character which had thrilled American politics since that day in 1896 when the boy orator from the Platte made the spectacular cross of gold speech on free silver that suddenly brought him national fame and the nomination for the presidency.

In the morning Bryan had addressed the congregation of the little First Methodist church, south of Dayton. He appeared in good health, worried by his fight of the last two weeks, but with the fire of the crusader in his speech. Pleading before the Tennessee parishioners, who looked to him as a spiritual leader, the great orator delivered his last public speech on the theme of fundamentalism, appealing for the world to uphold the literal accuracy of holy writ against the menace of science and modern thought.

Returning to the Rogers home, he ate a heavy dinner. He complained afterwards that he was tired and sleepy, so went to his bedroom for a nap. That was some time after 2 o'clock. Two physicians who were called as soon as his death was discovered, said that he probably had been dead for an hour.

Sue Hicks and McCardy were the last to converse with Bryan before his death.

"About 1:45 Mr. Bryan called me on the phone and we talked for a few minutes," Hicks said. "He had prepared and was printing in booklet form a speech to be presented to the Scopes jury in case the necessity should arise.

"Bryan conversed freely about his speech and said he was having several copies sent me for distribution among friends. Near the end of our conversation Mr. Bryan complained of feeling ill, but passed it off lightly with the remark that he would fit as a fiddle after few hours sleep.

"I offered to have a physician visit him, but he laughed and said there was no need of any alarm. 'It's just a little bad feeling, Sue,' he told me, 'I'll be all right in a few minutes.'

"We hung up and the next I heard he was dead."

When the Commoner retired his wife seated herself on the front porch and read the newspapers.

Approximately half an hour later Mrs. Bryan heard a faint groan in her husband's room and went to investigate. With her went McCardy, the chauffeur, and Bryan's personal attendant. Bryan seemed to be asleep and when aroused, expressed surprise at the alarm.

"I must be talking in my sleep," Mrs. Bryan said he told her with a laugh.

"Better wake me up about 4 o'clock," he told them.

Shortly before 4 p. m., the champion of the common people, who had thrilled Dayton to applause when he rose in the courtroom and pleaded that Christianity should prevail, lay in his bed, still apparently asleep and his wife turned to her papers, content that her husband had recovered completely from his slight indisposition.

A few minutes after 4, McCardy entered Bryan's room and called him. The Commoner did not stir and McCardy shook him.

"He didn't awaken, so I shook him again. Then I placed my hand on his forehead to see if he was all right and he felt cold to my touch.

"I jurked the sheet aside and felt his face. It was cold, too. His hands were cold, and then I knew that he was dead.

"Mrs. Bryan sat just outside the door reading and I called her.

"She dropped her papers and her face went white."

WRONG MAN SHOT IS POLICE THEORY

OFFICERS BELIEVE PORTLAND MAN WAS INTENDED VICTIM

SUPPOSED DESERT DUEL SHOWS MURDER MOTIVE

Confusion of Names Brought Out as Possible Explanation for Killing of Former Honolulu Man—Letters Back Theory.

Brawley, Calif.—That there were two Henry Kirks in the tragedy revealed by the "duel" deaths of two men in Imperial valley last week, and that it was the "wrong" Henry Kirk who was slain, is the latest theory developed by investigators working on the case.

In discussing the case District Attorney Utley expressed the belief that John Truden, found dead at Jacumba with a suicide note in his pocket stating he had killed Henry Kirk in a duel and was about to kill himself, thought he was killing Henry Kirk, former husband of Mrs. Bertha Kirk of Portland, when he fired the bullet that killed Henry Kirk, former Honolulu photographer.

Utley bases his theory on two letters, one the suicide letter of Truden and the other a letter written by Mrs. Bertha Kirk expressing the belief that the slain Kirk was her former husband, who six years ago married the divorced wife of John Truden.

The mistaken identity theory met no favor, however, with Kirk's father, W. M. Kirk, who came to Imperial valley and has built up his own explanation of his son's death.

The elder Kirk insists that there is no need to look beyond the borders of Imperial valley for a motive; that his son was killed over a woman living not far from the scene of the alleged duel. He expressed the belief that a grand jury investigation would establish this motive beyond a doubt and justify the arrest of the woman in the case as well as her husband.

BANK SUIT PUT OFF FOR SEVERAL MONTHS

San Francisco.—The Valley Bank conspiracy suit, growing out of the sale of that $12,000,000 Fresno institution more than a year ago to two other banks, may not come up to trial for many months. It was so indicated when Superior Judge Ward removed the case from his calendar to be reset. The plaintiffs succeeded in obtaining the continuance, and also through another ruling by Judge Ward they will be permitted to introduce an amended complaint, in which new defendants were added to those originally named.

Judge Ward sanctioned the amended complaint upon the plea that the new counts were not known at the time of the filing of the original complaint and came to light only through the depositions which have been under way for several months.

Resent Shasta Mud Rumor

Yreka.—Northern California is highly resentful over reports emanating from Central California that Mount Shasta, through Mud creek, is pouring rivers of debris into the McCloud and Sacramento rivers and is proving a hazard to the city of McCloud. A 3-foot ditch is carrying the debris away from Mud creek, an artery of a glacier on the southern side of Mount Shasta, an artery that has let the glacial debris float away during the warm summer months. Last year Mount Shasta was swept clear of snow through the intense heat and an exceptional rush of mud and rocks swept Mud creek.

Hall's Trial Postponed

Sacramento.—The trial of Floyd Hall, San Quentin escape, who is condemned to the gallows at Folsom prison for the murder of H. J. Litzberg, Sacramento merchant, on a charge of shooting Patrolman Clyde Nunn, scheduled for July 28 in Superior Judge J. F. Pullen's court, by consent of the defense attorneys, was postponed until September 21. Conviction for the shooting of Nunn also carries a death penalty inasmuch as Hall was under sentence for life at the time of the shooting.

News of Interest to All

Friday, September 11, will be Supervisors' day at the state fair.

San Leandro's $38,000 American Legion home is under construction.

The June testing records of Lassen county cows showed a number of 60-pound animals.

Menlo Park will carry its fight for incorporation to the superior court. The supervisors threw out about one-third the area sought in the petition.

Winners in the national prize essay contest of the American Chemical society for four scholarships at Vassar college and two at Yale included Ruth Jamieson, Rivera, Cal. The contestants wrote on chemical subjects.

Tehama county will hold its fair at Red Bluff, October 2 and 3, at which the agricultural resources of the county will be shown in a more than ordinary display and live stock will be featured in a pretentious exhibition.

Officers investigating the explosion and fire which wrecked the home of H. D. Schroeder, near Dinuba and killed five members of the family, reached the belief that the tragedy was not accidental and adopted the theory that foul play was responsible.

Earthquake shocks felt in San Francisco and the bay region on the morning of July 19 were of five minutes duration and of sufficient intensity to be readily distinguished. The needles of the seismograph at the University of Santa Clara ran to their full amplitude of ten centimeters for twenty seconds. No damage occurred.

The management of the Pacific Slope Dairy show, to be held at Oakland, November 14 to 21, in both the dairy and live stock divisions are adhering to a policy of inviting men of national reputation to serve on the board of judges. V. D. Chappel, father of the dairy industry division of the Oregan agricultural college, will head the board of butter judges.

Oroville's first commercial silk crop of 1,000,000 worms, the largest single hatch ever raised under one roof, it is claimed, is ready for market. It is said by a member of the company that the costs run well under the estimate and below the costs of producing silk in foreign countries. Prediction of silk plantations of 5,000 in California is freely made.

To discuss four paramount issues to the mining industry, a regional mineral meeting will be held at Stockton, Friday, October 2, under the auspices of the Mineral Allied Industries of California. Mining and mineral men from Calaveras, San Joaquin, Mariposa, Mono, Tuolumne, Stanislaus, Merced, Fresno, Amador, Kings and Tulare counties will attend.

Mrs. Mary C. Tubbs of Stockton is among the first to come forward with proof of eligibility to the California Diamond Jubilee Covered Wagon club. She was born in a prairie schooner near Carson City, September 4, 1861, and was the first white woman to enter the Mariposa Big Tree grove. The late H. W. Cowell, pioneer irrigationist of the San Joaquin valley, was her father.

Miss Augusta C. Robertson of San Francisco has been instructing the bay city youngsters ten months every year for fifty-eight years. She began teaching in 1867 and her record shows she has missed only one term since then, that being the year of the San Francisco earthquake. Her years of service have never been equaled, according to state retirement salary statistics.

Madison Slaughter, a former pastor of Chico, whose sensational trial in 1916 on a statutory charge preferred by a 15-year-old girl of his parish resulted in conviction and sentence to San Quentin, died recently at Puyallup, Wash. The body was sent to Woodland for burial. Slaughter's case was carried through the highest courts in an effort to secure a reversal of judgment.

Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for John T. Scopes in the Tennessee evolution trial, will represent Isaac Wolfgang, Los Angeles "milk bottle" murderer, in a final appeal before the United States supreme court in October. Wolfgang has been a prisoner in San Quentin prison for more than two years, following his conviction of shooting to death Oliver Dinsmore, Los Angeles policeman.

Letters of appeal have been sent out by the Francisco fathers as the first step toward rebuilding the old Santa Barbara mission, which is virtually in ruins as a result of the earthquake. Services have been interrupted for the first time since 1786, when the mission was founded by Father Junipero Serra. It is estimated that reconstruction will cost approximately a half million dollars.

SENATORS YOUNG AND SHORTRIDGE IN CONFERENCE

United States Senator Sam. M. Shortridge, was in Los Gatos Thursday to confer with Senator Young on the federal narcotic measure which he intends to introduce to the December session of the congress.

"We are drafting a bill dealing with the narcotic evil," explained Senator Shortridge, "and hope to enlist the direct co operation and aid of the federal government in the care and rehabilitation of narcotic addicts, matching the amount the states provide dollar for dollar in providing homes for these unfortunate victims and circumventing the devilish ingenuity and punishing the peddlars and importers who are bringing in and distributing these drugs in the United States.

"The states can legislate in a domestic sense touching matters within their own borders; the nations can only legislate in regard to outside or interstate matters. But the federal government appropriates money to assist states in building roads; in the prevention of fires; in the matter of epidemics, or floods or other catastrophes.

"Man is the greatest thing in God's world. If it is good policy for the federal government to assist in a material way in these lesser problems, why is it not good, wise, Christian policy for it to co-operate with the state in treating this evil which exists in every part of the United States, which is undermining its citizenry and making criminals by the millions?

"My theory is," he added, "that if the government can consistently co-operate with the states in eradicating the hoof-and-mouth disease or other epidemics, for instance, or in building roads, dredging rivers and harbors as a matter of public policy—and such power has never been questioned—it may, with equal constitutionality, come to the aid of the states in rehibilitating victims of the drug habit, and in punishing and dealing with those repsnsible for them."

Drug addicts are a burden upon society just as the the insane, and are mentally ill. Senator Shortridge would have the law so made as to take care of and treat the drug addict as a sick man. "They are potential criminals and are made so in reality through drugs. In their craving for the drugs they will lie, steal, murder, do anything. Their mentality is gone, and they are not aware of their crime," said the senator.

"This terrible drug habit wrecks the body, crucifies the soul, and destroys health. Addicts require long care to build up their physiques, and even longer treatment to fortify their characters so they can withstand the temptation to return to drugs. The government should aid in this, and through its own high-grade experts, co-operate with municipal and state boards to raise the standards of treatment in theory and practice so that the fullest benefit shall be derived in checking this evil, just as it tries to stamp out cancer, tuberculosis or any epidemic."

Mud Creek Rising

The Mount Shasta mud glacier, which covered more than 10,000 acres of land with mud, silt and rocks last year, has broken loose under the torrid weather of the past few weeks and is again threatening. Mud creek, which drains the glacier, is widening and deepening until it is feared that it will endanger the headwaters of the Sacramento river. Government engineers who have made observations, say that the amount of imprisoned water resulting from the exceedingly wet season will prevent a recurrence of the great mud flow which occurred last year. One report says that all fish in the McCloud river are being destroyed by the flow and that the McCloud River railroad tracks are being raised three feet for a distance of one mile to get them out of the way.

Employers who in the past have failed to carry compensation insurance for the benefit of employes injured while at work are now subject to arrest. The last legislature amended the compensation act to require that "every employer, except the state and all political subdivisions of institutions thereof, shall secure the payment of compensation."

BREAKFAST SHOWER GIVEN FOR MISS BAUGH

The delightful home of Mrs. Ralston Alison was the scene of a charmingly appointed breakfast, Saturday morning, July 25. Miss Janice Baugh, a very popular bride-to-be, was the honored guest and the hostess succeeded in making the affair a distinct surprise to her, as she was sent to the house after the guests had been seated.

The delicious Southern style breakfast was served at small tables, decorated with delphinium and pink snapdragons, and dainty brides naming the places.

The hostess was assisted in the serving by her daughters, Misses Lucile and Helen.

After the breakfast, Miss Baugh was the recipient of many beautiful linen articles, in evidence of the esteem in which she is held by her friends.

Those enjoying the unique affair were: Mesdames G. B. Rodeck, M. E. Kennedy, D. H. Cramer, C. Berry, H. E. Lillingston, Lawrence Neville, W. N. Lloyd, J. C. Ainsley, Hattie Baugh, E. R. Kennedy, S. L. Hayes, Ralston Alison, and the Misses Helen and Janice Baugh, Lois Gardner and Mary Rodeck

BEWARE OF SHARKS

Again Campbell has been visited by the magazine subscription shark. But a few days ago several very interesting conversationalists were on our streets accosting the working men of the town with a tale of the wonderful bargains in magazine subscriptions. In several instances these defrauders received cash which was their game, and all the misguided patron received was his receipt. The actions of these solicitors was watched and when they became suspicious of authority they left town. Such cases as these are what may be expected when the town has no authority. Such nuisances would not be tolerated in an incorporated town.

Santa Cruz for Vacation Land

Happyland is Summerland at vacation time in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

Here, down rugged pine-clad gorges, across the gray mountains pour h sts from San Francisco and its environs to sport amid nature.

Trains from San Francisco carry the vacationists on the route to Los G s and Santa Cruz and by the way drop their crowds at resorts that have become famous in song and story for their beauty and grandeur, their quiet restfulness.

The stillness of giant forests, great redwoods towering to the skies, the soft murmurs of brooks and mountain streams, whispering across leafy and pebbled channels, winding through a land magic in its quiet and beauty.

Hundreds of families are now encamped in the quiet ravines of the Santa Cruz mountain range. Hundreds of families are living there now in homes they either own for this period of the year or rent for a month or two.

Resort hotels, some of them ideal in their appointment, are caring for hundreds more. Dance pavilions at night are crowded. Music dances among the trees and soars over the mountain side.

There is probably no other state in the union that has so beautiful a territory devoted to its pleasure at this time of the year. The mountain streams, rivers in the winter rains, subside to quiet brooks. And here and there, as the brooks widen into remnants of the rivers, are wide swimming pools.

Each resort, and there is an encampment every two miles, has "the old swimming hole." Here comes scores every morning and afternoon and in the evening, too, the woods echo to the joyous shouts of the bathers.

One of the scenic wonders of the world is but a stone's throw from these fascinating pleasure resorts. It is Big Basin. Here in a cup in the mountains, amid solemn grandeur, are hosts of big trees, redwood giants, standing for centuries as they stand today, and rearing to the heavens a canopy of green.

Beneath this leafy ceiling picnickers gather in their autos. No vacation spent in the Santa Cruz Mountains is complete without a visit to the Big Basin, where gathered the tribal chieftains at council in the days of old, the days before the dons and the mission priests came.

Here and there relics of these Indian tribes are found by vacationists.

The Big Basin is like a great cathedral. So still and silent are the giant woods in their depths that the twitter of the birds, high above the visitors' heads, seems like sounds from another world.

MAKING A GOOD TOWN BETTER

If this is not true the discussion ought to cease: "We stop playing, not because we grow old; we grow old because we stop playing."

There are so many forms of play that it becomes difficult to confine ourselves to the idea without too much distraction of thought. But people ought to play more for play's sake; adults as well as children. To the child, play is natural. To the adult it is the same, but the adult suppresses the impulse. Play, to the adult, is something confined to annual picnics or subordinated to more so-called serious pursuits. And therein the adult misses his youth.

No community can be overdone in the matter of parks and public playgrounds. Every playground built in America renders the necessity for jails and reformatories less. In 1924, 711 cities of the United States and Canada maintained 8,115 play areas under leadership. In 1900, only 14 cities were "experimenting" with public recreation facilities. Now the expansion has become large enough to include recreation centers for adults, organized athletics, water sports, community music and dramatics, and special celebrations.

What does all this mean? Richard C. Cabot, in "What Men Live By," says we live by work, worship, love and play. Play, then, is one of the important ingredients in the fulfillment of the more abundant life. Wholesome, innocent, non-commercialized play is one of the foundations of life that renews energy and recreates the body and mind. Crowded streets, cramped apartments, thickened motor traffic, and tightening adherence to private property rights suggests and demands the need for more breathing places for the people, more parks and playgrounds. The proper use of leisure has much to do with efficiency during working time. A well-equipped playground, a park and recreation center mean health, safety, good sportsmanship, and promotion of community happiness.

AVENUES OF SERVICE

There is more than one avenue for service.

Some may, and indeed many should, find it through the chamber of commerce; others through clubs, lodges, societies and various other organizations.

It may be found in one's daily vocation by putting one's heart into the work that is to do.

It may be found through the direct avenue of the church, and all that the church stands for in the community.

Indeed, it may be found in te quiet but industrious living up to the ideals of good citizenship.

Whatever legitimate efforts are put forth to further the progress of the community will bear fruit; if not today, then tomorrow.

You have your choice of finding the best avenue through which YOU can serve, but you have no moral choice to sit idly and let the rest of the folks go by.

FEDERAL MONEY FOR DRUG CURE

In every capable study of the drug evil in America, it has been recognized that the "dope" addict is the one who really keeps this traffic alive.

It is the addict whose craving for narcotics creates the economic demand for more and more opium and morphine and cocaine.

It is the addict whose dollars support the elaborate chain of illicit peddlers, wholesalers, importers, and "runners" across the ocean and across the borders, who flood our country with "dope." It is the addict, driven on by his abnormal appetite, who steals to buy drugs and who commits a huge percentage of the petty thefts of the nation. It is the addict of today who supports the whole system which, in turn, creates new addicts tomorrow.

Yet to punish the addict by prison sentence has always impressed the authorities as unduly severe. The addict is nearer to the dipsomaniac than he is to the criminal. He must be segregated and cured, not punished. But since there are about four million addicts in this country, the problem becomes a great one.

Believing that, if addiction be abolished or reduced, the whole narcotic traffic will be undermined at its foundation, State Senator Sanborn Young and Senator Samuel Shortridge are planning to elicit Federal aid.

Legislation is to be proposed, under which the Federal government will appropriate $5,000,000 for the cure of addicts.

It will go, dollar for dollar, to those States which already are active in addiction cure. It will double the efficacy of the efforts of those States, and at the same time tempt other States to enter the health-crusade.

"Abolish he addict, and you abolish the drug evil." That is an inspiring slogan, and while thorough-going success is perhaps unattainable for human kind, it is entirely possible that such an appropriation as the above would starve out the drug-ring in part, and boost the price of narcotics so high that the rest of the structure would fall of itself.—San Francisco Examiner.

The New Man and the New Woman

"The 'new man' deserves credit for the 'new woman,'" says Mrs. Rorer, writer and teacher of household economics. "He has has exchanged our brooms and our dustpans, our washboards and hand wringers for rows of electric switches; we sweep witL vacuum cleaners and wash with electric washers.

"The 'new man' has given us stoves that regulate themselves, and fireless cookers, so that we can be off to our meetings and our parties while our dinner cooks. Hs has given us telephones so that we can 'phone for food' and in marketing from our homes increase our leisure.

"Yes," she concludes, "the men have given us this new freedom that we are talking about. And if they hadn't, if it had been left to us, we would probably still be wandering around in the same jungle we were in before they gave us so many kinds of service and opened the doors separating us from a fuller life."

Great Fairs Lose Money

Some of the greatest world fairs have been tremendous money losers. The Vienna exhibition in 1873 had a loss of $10,000,000; the Philadelphia exposition of more than $1,000,000, and the Paris International of more than $5,000,000. London's exposition last summer also was a failure financially.

Prune Harvest to Begin Next Week

Work on the 1925 prune harvest will begin next week according to local packers. This will be two weeks in advance of the start of picking last year, due largely to the unusually hot weather experienced recently.

Picking of sugar prunes is now in progress in some sections of both the Santa Clara and San Joaquin valleys, and will be in full swing within the next few days. In a few foothill orchards the French variety is already being gathered, but such fruit has ripened unusally early and is not of the best quality. Neither the California Prune and Apricot Growers' association nor independent pickers were prepared to estimate the probable scale of prices.

National Forests One of Country's Richest Assets

The first national forest to be created under the Clarke-McNary forest act, passed by congress in June, 1924, is the Benning national forest near Columbus, Ga. This new forest embraces 78,500 acres of the Fort Benning military reservation, and all rights to use the area for military purposes are reserved by the War department, says the New York Times. An excellent stand of pine timber is expected to yield forest products for military use and for sale to bidders.

Including the Benning National forest three national forests are located in Georgia. The total number of national forests is 148, and they embrace 157,000,000 acres. These areas form a chain of public lands that produce timber on a perpetual-supply basis, as well as provide recreational grounds. They protect the watersheds of many navigable rivers and the water supply of many communities. They also serve as refuge for birds and animals.

Old Yucatan Vehicles

Although the inevitable automobile has reached Yucatan, a state in Mexico, the people still cling tenaciously to the old methods of transportation, which includes the carreta, the coche, the volan and the volante, although the introduction of automobiles bids fair eventually to eliminate these vehicles, the Montreal Star says.

The carreta is a heavy two-wheeled truck; the coche, a light four-wheeled, rubber-tired, rigid-topped carriage, with body supported on heavy leather straps, similar to the stagecoach of America's old West, and the volante, a very heavy four-wheeled vehicle, somewhat like a victoria, but with the body supported on heavy leather straps, used for rough travel in the rural districts.

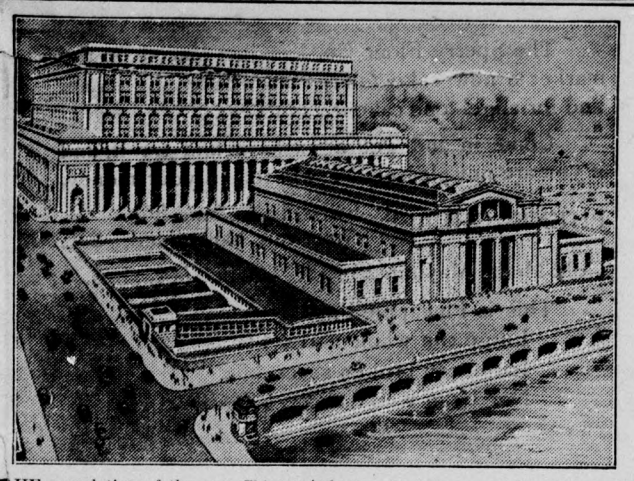
Latest Triumph in Railroading



THE completion of the new Chicago Union Station marks a noteworthy accomplishment in the history of important engineering undertakings, from which travelers from all parts of the United States will derive pleasure and benefit.

The station is without doubt one of the finest and most efficiently designed railroad terminals in the world. It forms a vital link in the realization of the "Chicago City Beautiful Plan." Simplicity, accessibility and convenience for the traveling public are the essential virtues of the new terminal. Rest and recreation rooms, ticket offices, barber shop, dining rooms, stores of various kinds, and almost every convenience known to travelers, are to be found on the one level, no steps to climb.

The main station is a low monumental type of building with a row of massive columns of classic design along the entire east front. Once inside, the traveler finds himself in a gigantic waiting room more than 100 feet high and brilliantly lighted through skylights in the great arch ceiling. Colonnades inclose the room, the walls of which are patterned after the architecture of ancient Rome. Bordering this room are the ultra-complete passenger terminal facilities. An innovation in railway terminal design is a conference room accommodating 125 people, which is available, without charge, to patrons of the Union Station lines for conferences and other meetings.

To give some idea of the immensity of the new station, it may be stated that the main building covers an area of about three acres with a concourse covering 60,000 square feet. The entire terminal facilities cover more than 35 acres and will expedite the prompt and satisfactory handling of 50,000 passengers, 400 tons of baggage and 300 trains daily with room for future expansion. Fifteen acres of glass were used in the various coverings over the train sheds, which extend more than 1,200 feet beyond the main structure. A total of 17,000 tons of structural steel, 175,000 cubic feet of Indiana limestone and 10,000 cubic feet of granite were used in the station building and concourse. The foundation consists of 449 cylindrical concrete piers from four to ten feet in diameter, reaching to a depth of more than 60 feet below the level of the Chicago river.

Those who have had the privilege of inspecting the new station pronounce it a marvel in terminal construction and are urging their friends to see it on their next visit to Chicago.

The station is used jointly by the Pennsylvania Railroad; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry.; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., and the Chicago & Alton R. R.

Chico.—Shortly after 9 in the morning Ernest Smith, a paroled convict from Walla Walla, Wash., held up the Bank of Durham and got away with $619.45. Within a short time he was arrested by Constable Wageman. At 5 o'clock, the same afternoon, Smith had been sentenced to life imprisonment at Folsom. Smith, unmasked, entered the bank just after it opened and forced the cashier, S. N. Graves, and Miss Helen Hester, the assistant, into the vault.

Fire which broke out in a shoe repair store in Sausalito, destroyed four buildings with a loss of more than $50,000, imperiled firemen and spectators when live wires broke and fell and a fire hose burst, and for a time endangered large stores of gasoline at the Standard Oil Co., storage tanks.

Murder of peculiarly revolting nature was uncovered near Pollock, Shasta county, when the body of a man was found among the bushes with his throat cut from ear to ear and all marks of identity on the clothing removed. The dead man has been identified by tunnel workers.

W. E. Neuteboon, youthful leader of a bandit gang that recently attempted a series of holdups in Anaheim, pleaded guilty to an attempt to commit robbery and was sentenced to twenty years at San Quentin. Two companions, including a woman, will be tried on the same charge.

PACIFIC GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY — PACIFIC'S COURTEOUS CONTINUOUS SERVICE

gas leaks
should be reported immediately

Be sure that all appliances and valves—including the pilot-lights of your Gas Range, Gas Water Heater, and Gas Furnace—are turned off tight. Then watch the small, "two-foot" dial on your Gas Meter. The mechanism that operates this dial is extremely sensitive.

If, with all use of Gas shut off, the needle on the dial moves, there is a leak and the Gas should be immediately shut off at the Meter and the Company notified by telephone. Never start looking for a leak with a lighted match, candle or lamp.

If you smell Gas, report it at once! It is the Company's policy to send a service man to investigate as soon as possible after the call is received.

The Good Man

Gen. H. Clay Page, on his return from Europe, criticized France at a Charleston dinner.

"France has changed sadly since the World war," he said. "She used to think the best nation was the most intelligent one, but she appears to think now that the best nation is the one that is strongest.

"France is like the bereaved widow.

"'So you've lost your husband,' a friend said to her. 'He certainly was a good man, wasn't he?'

"'He certainly was,' moaned the widow, burying her face in her black-bordered handkerchief. 'No three cops in Paint Rock could handle him.'"

Equestrian Marriage

Tampa, Fla., has had its first equestrian marriage. The wedding ceremony was performed with the bride, Miss Myra Roberts of Avon Park, Fla., the bridegroom, Thomas R. Culler of Cameron, S. C., the best man, maid of honor and seventeen guests, mounted on horses, and the flower girl and ring bearer on Shetland ponies. The minister stood on a stone wall in front of the church.

The first speed record between Los Angeles and San Francisco was set twenty years ago by a daring motorist named George Hunsley, according to the records of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Driving a 15-horsepower White steamer and carrying four passengers, he made the distance in twenty-one hours and thirteen minutes, an average of just a little less than twenty-four miles an hour. This record was not broken for more than a year and until another driver took three hours off the mark with an average of almost twenty-eight miles an hour.

TH' OLE GROUCH

Are you as good as your credit?

Even if some people can't read they're right.

The last Chirstmas necktie is beginning to frazzle.

Turn "scofflaw" into "scafold." That'll put a kick into it!

About every "ism" has had its advocates excepting rheumatism.

Laughter is a good tonic, but the horse-laugh has made many a fellow turn pale.

Is a Lion afraid of a cock?

Medieval wiseacres used to wag their heads and tell tales like this in the village marketplace.

An amusing superstition, of course, but is it any more absurd than the belief that there is something mysteriously "better" about eastern motor oils just because they cost more and come from eastern crudes? Professional drivers and economy-run experts out after records don't share this superstition—why should you pay tribute?

Zerolene—the choice of Western Motorists

Zerolene lubricates more cars in the Pacific Coast states than any other oil made—a better oil if it does cost less. Zerolene increases the gasoline mileage, reduces the carbon removal and maintenance costs and lengthens the life of any car in which it is used.

Zerolene checked fifteen times for quality

As a matter of fact the best crude so far discovered for the manufacture of motor lubricants is obtained on the Pacific Coast. And the most highly developed refining process is the high-vacuum process, the patents on which are held by this Company. And 15 positive checks on Zerolene at the refinery make quality control absolute.

Why pay tribute to superstition when you want the best oil you can get? Insist on Zerolene—ask for it by name.

Get the Facts!

A series of independent and impartial reports showing the experience of large users with Zerolene has been collected in our booklet, "Why Pay Tribute to a Superstition?" Ask any Standard Oil Company representative or Zerolene dealer for a copy.

Tree in Utah May Be the Oldest on Earth

Ecologists have become interested in a gnarled tree growing in Logan canyon, Utah, about 100 miles north of Salt Lake City, which it is authoritatively stated is at least 2,700 years old

Although the tree is gnarled, it does not lack virility, and it is believed that it will live for many more years. It springs from the summit of a cliff in country little traversed except by cattlemen and sheep herders.

Maurice Linford, former student at the Utah Agricultural college at Logan, and this year an instructor of botany at the institution, was roaming the mountains and valleys fringing upon Logan canyon in search of new specimens when he noticed the tree. He found it to be a member of the Juniper family. With the members of his class he later took borings with a view to determining its age, which he estimated to be more than 3,000 years.

Dr. George R. Hill, botanist and plant pathologist of the college, and Dr. L. E. Nuffer, his assistant, made new borings and determined that the irreducible minimum would give the tree an age of 2,700 years.

Not Unusual for Capital Cities to Change Names

By a big majority of votes the Norwegian parliament decided to change the name of the capital from Christiania to Oslo, from New Year's day.

Oslo is the name by which the capital used to be known. It became Christiania on being rebuilt by King Christian IV in the Seventeenth century, although the name Oslo has since been retained by the bishopric of Christiania and the Court of Assizes.

This, of course, is not the only example of a capital being rechristened. St. Petersburg has undergone two name changes since the World war, being known for a time as Petrograd and now as Leningrad. Constantinople has likewise been twice rechristened, formerly being known as Byzantium and later as Stamboul. Paris was once Lutetia, and New York formerly New Amsterdam, while Ottawa used to be called Bytown.

Ominous Word

Lord Robert Cecil told a story to a group of New York reporters the other day.

"There has been, you know," he said, "a perfect epidemic of weed-killer poisoning in England lately.

"A young English soldier, just back from service in Germany, wanted to air his German, and so, he said one day in taking leave of his girl:

"'Auf wiedersehn, my dear.'

"'Humph. What does that mean?' the girl inquired.

"'It means good-by. It's good-by in the German language.'

"'Oh, yes, I see. Well, then, weed killer, old thing.'

"'Weed killer?'

"'Yes—weed killer. That means good-by in any language.'"—New York Herald.

New Idea in Locomotives

A new locomotive, designed to meet special switching conditions in freight yards, consists of a complete electrical plant on wheels. It is smokeless and silent. An oil engine is directly connected with the generator and the current made by the latter is passed to four motors, each geared to one of the axles. The engine is of 300 horse power, burning oil, and each of the four motors on the four axles has a rating of something less than 100 horse power. As ordinarily used in the switching service, this engine consumes from 20 cents to 26 cents' worth of fuel oil an hour.
